

Things to Know at Your Campus

- How many international students are enrolled at your college or university?
- Where do they come from? How many countries are represented? Which national groups are most numerous?
- What does the university provide in order to meet the needs of the international students? Orientation? Housing? Airport pickup? Social events?
- How does the university administer or coordinate this program? Has a Foreign Student Advisor's Office been established? Who is this person and where is the office located?
- Does the university assign international students to a particular dorm or housing area?
- Has the university organized a "Host Family" program?
- Has anything been organized to provide for the special needs of the wives and children of international students?
- Which organizations on the campus (or groups or churches in the community) have developed programs to assist international students? Are they open to participation by your group? Is a community association or network already in place?
- Where do the international student groups meet? Could your facilities (student center, church) provide an area as a regular meeting place?
- On some campuses several faculty members have often taken a special interest in working with international students. Do you know who they are?
- Are there former missionaries, pastors, volunteers, or persons in your community or circuit who have served in overseas missions who could serve as a resource for your group?
